Winthrop Portrait

Although John Winthrop is perhaps remembered more for his puritan faith, he represented the Massachusetts Bay Company and was a businessman. He pledged to found a “City on a Hill” by which he certainly meant a prosperous city and avoid the difficulties that had plagued his predecessors at Salem. Prosperity implied good links with the mother country and trade. It would not be long before Boston would develop as a port.