By 1666, John Harrison, ropemaker, had driven off his only competition, John Heyman to Charlestown, and had established sheds on his ropefield. Samuel Clough’s reconstructed map of Boston in 1673 shows Harrison’s ropewalk running the length of what became later known as Belcher’s Lane and then Purchase Street.

Reproduced courtesy of the Massachusetts Historical Society