This anonymous view of the Boston Common in 1815 shows the ropewalks, which moved there in 1795. The structures rising above the roofs in the detail are the chimneys for the tar houses, which were extended to carry any sparks away from the walks.